

A place by the window

A small table stands beside the window.

I leave a book there and sit down

when the room is quiet. From this spot,

I can see the trees across the street.

A short walk

After lunch, I take a short walk.

The path bends around a quiet pond.

I stop near the water for a moment and watch a duck swim toward the reeds.

Preparing a small task

I clear a space on the table

and set out the things I need.

My notes show the first few steps.

I read them before I begin.

Once everything is ready, I start slowly and work through one step at a time.

I clear a space on the table

and set out the things I need.

My notes show the first few steps.

I read them before I begin.

An afternoon change

The sky grows dark after lunch,
and rain begins to tap on the glass.

I bring my chair away from the window.

The room feels different in the soft light.

I open a book and read a few pages
while I wait for the rain to pass.

The sky grows dark after lunch,
and rain begins to tap on the glass.

I bring my chair away from the window.

The room feels different in the soft light.

Sharing a useful idea

My friend keeps losing small notes,

so I suggest using one notebook instead.

We try the idea for a few days and leave it beside the front door.

Before going out, we check the last page.

The notes are easy to find now.

A simple change has made it easier to remember the small things we need.

My friend keeps losing small notes,

so I suggest using one notebook instead.

Plans for the next day

Tomorrow I plan to visit the market.

I write a short list before bed.

In the morning, I will check my bag and make sure the list is inside.

If the weather is fine, I will walk along the quiet path beside the park.

When I return, I will put things away and spend the afternoon reading a book.
